

Dear GMFH friends,

This special issue of our newsletter is to share some exciting news with you. We are happy to announce the launch of the new Gut Microbiota for Health website! After several months of hard work and dedication, we are delighted to officially announce the release of our new home page.

Launched in 2012, the Gut Microbiota for Health Experts Exchange platform has grown since then extending its community of health professionals and scientists. The European Society of Neurogastroenterology and Motility (ESNM) promotes this online community with the aim of sharing the latest news and research about gut microbiota and promoting debate about its role and importance in health and disease.

The new platform is the outcome of the unification of the Gut Microbiota Worldwatch platform with the Gut Microbiota for Health Experts Exchange community. Our Internet address does not change, so you will continue to find our content at www.gutmicrobiotaforhealth.com. This integration gives rise to the largest and most established network of information and debate about gut microbiota. The number of followers and resources on both platforms have been growing since 2012 and we currently have more than 15,000 members worldwide.

Our new platform is designed with a fresh new look and user-friendly navigation and also includes noticeable changes, including a new logo.

Despite all these new developments, most of the content published to date will remain available. The accuracy and truthfulness of our new platform remains unchanged as content is provided by a group of leading experts in the field of gut microbiota. Furthermore, you will continue to find the same kind of specialist content you have been reading for the last 3 years: study descriptions, papers and reviews, interviews with experts, etc.
