Dear Friends,

This newsletter brings you hot-off-the-press content from the Fourth Gut Summit!

This year's lively event, held in Barcelona last weekend by the European Society of Neurogastroenterology & Motility (ESNM), the European Society for Paediatric Gastroenterology, Hepatology and Nutrition (ESPGHAN), the European Crohn's and Colitis Organisation (ECCO), the European Association for the Study of the Liver (EASL), and the American Gastroenterological Association (AGA) brought attendees from all over the world together for conversations about gut microbiota science and its emerging clinical applications.

The speakers -- from Martin Blaser to Peer Bork to Gary Wu -- covered a broad range of topics related to gut microbiota and health. If you missed it, replays of the sessions are now posted online! Don't forget to keep the discussion going after you watch by commenting or tweeting about what you heard. You can also search for the hashtag #GMFH2015 on Twitter to see what participants were tweeting about during the talks.

We will follow up with more information about of the most provocative conference topics, so expect to learn more in the weeks ahead!
